CAR LIMIT FOR THROUGH TRAINS

Car limits must be strictly adhered to, and sections of trains must be made (not doubleheaded) when limit is reached. At intermediate points one car beyond the limit may be added. When more than one car, train must be split. In severe weather when one engine will not handle car limit, then doublehead.

Trains, unless otherwise ordered, will wait at Junction Points for Connections as follows:

Local trains not shown as waiting for connection will depart when ready unless otherwise directed. Trains specified as waiting for connections will depart after waiting required time.

When trains are liable to miss connection, conductors must wire superintendent the number of passengers for such connection that train may be held longer than time specified, if warranted.

Conductors must ascertain from agents or stationmasters if there are overdue trains other than regular connections, or sections of regular connections, and wait for such trains the same as for regular connections.
